ANIMAL STEWARDSHIP CODE of CONDUCT

At JACE Group, the ethical care and well-being of animals is a core principle of our events. We expect all vendors to demonstrate responsible animal stewardship, which includes proper housing, nutrition, cleanliness, environmental control, safety, and public responsibility for any animals in their care.

While we acknowledge that the reptile and exotic animal community is diverse in practice and opinion, our obligation as event promoters is to provide a safe, respectful, and reputable environment for attendees, vendors, and animals alike. Our vendors are held to a higher standard of care and conduct than casual pet owners, as they are representing this community in a public and professional setting, educating the public on these animals.

Animal stewardship includes:

- Clean, appropriately sized, and secure enclosures
- Species-specific temperature, humidity, and environmental needs
- Preventing overcrowding or inappropriate species cohabitation
- Immediate cleanup of feces or other unsanitary conditions
- Proper handling, restraint, and safety measures
- Vigilant monitoring of animal health and stress levels

JACE Group and its staff reserve the exclusive right to evaluate the condition of animals and overall vendor presentation. Final decisions regarding animal welfare, vendor conduct, or participation eligibility rest solely with the show promoters. These determinations are not subject to outside debate or appeal.

JACE Group does not endorse or encourage the free handling of venomous animals. While we are not a regulatory authority and cannot enforce off-site practices, we strongly urge all content creators and influencers within the animal community to act responsibly.

If you choose to showcase free handling in any public forum, you should clearly communicate to your audience that such actions are extremely dangerous and should only be performed by trained professionals with proper education, experience, and safety protocols in place.

This practice should never be attempted by individuals who lack the appropriate training, as it poses serious risks to both the handler and the public. We expect all participants in our events to promote responsible animal care and safety, both on-site and in their public messaging.

We understand that care standards can vary, and accusations can sometimes stem from misunderstanding, personal disagreements, or unverified claims. Therefore, as a company, we will not act on allegations alone. We are obligated to base any corrective or disciplinary action on clear, observed, and documentable issues. This is to protect vendors from discrimination, personal bias, or unfounded accusations.

Additionally:

- We will not disclose disciplinary decisions or discussions about one vendor to another.
- We will not comment on another vendor's animal care, sales practices, or eligibility status unless legally required (e.g., subpoenaed in court).
- We will not respond to pressure or hearsay from individuals demanding action against other vendors without verified, first-hand evidence.

This policy protects not only our staff and vendors, but the overall fairness and legal integrity of our events. Vendors who are unwilling to meet these standards may be denied future participation.

By registering for any JACE Group event, you acknowledge and accept this Animal Stewardship Code of Conduct and agree to abide by the judgments of event management.

NO-CALL/NO-SHOW & EARLY LEAVING POLICY

- No-call/no-show vendors will be charged $150. (Vendors must call before the clock strikes opening to VIP ticket holders. After 3 no-call/no-shows, you will be suspended from vending for a period of 12 calendar months from all JACE Group events.)
- No vendor may leave the event on any day before the end of the event without permission from the promoter, and will be charged a $100 fee. After 3 times of leaving early, the exhibitor will be suspended from vending at any JACE Group event for a period of 6 calendar months.
- No refunds will be given for missed events.
- Attendance is publicly advertised. Your absence reflects poorly on the show.

TERMS & CONDITIONS

By submitting your registration, you agree to all terms above. If you do not accept these terms, do not submit your registration. No refunds will be issued unless the event is canceled by JACE Group.
